

Art Display Policy for Ruth's Gallery

Revised and adopted by the Red Feather Mountain Library District, October 24, 2018.

The Red Feather Lakes Community Library accepts shows from individual artists and groups of artists. Often the Library will invite area artists to present an exhibit. Artist or group solicitations will be reviewed but not necessarily accepted. While the work of local or regional artists is preferred, presentations may be from other sources.

Once a given display has been approved, the Library reserves the right to determine the appropriateness of items to be included in the display and may accept or reject any or all items intended for display.

Potential artists and exhibitors should note the following:

Ruth's Gallery is located in a prominent part of the library, accessible to families and children, and this should be considered when choosing works to exhibit.

- Ruth's Gallery is not intended to be a commercial venue and prices are not posted. Artist contact information is a welcome part of the display. Business cards are accepted. It is the responsibility of the artist to install and remove the show. The Library has a ladder, hooks, and shelves available for use.
- Artists may create and post statements or other descriptions of the show.
- The Library assumes no liability in case of damage or theft.
- Shows are normally one month in duration. However, variances may occasionally be made in facilitating reasonable public use, for example setting up table and chairs for computer or study access during holiday or high demand traffic.
- The dates of artwork installation and removal will be noted on the Artist Display Agreement.
- Artists will read and sign the Artist Display Agreement Form and receive a copy of that document and this policy.

Artists or groups must confirm their show with the Library one month in advance. Though occasional exceptions may be made, artists or groups are limited to one show per year. Preference will be given to artists or groups whose work has not been displayed in the previous year.
